WASHINGTON, D. C., SEPTEMBER 3, 1881.

THE SABBATH OF PRAYER

In Behalf of President Carfield. Sahbath dawns? what brings this sacred day? Ye morning hours, within you darkened roots. Dart one bright gleam, that to a waiting world Dart one bright gream, that to a waiting world.
One ray of hope may come, one word of cheer.
'Twixt life and death flores has the condict been?
Now shall the dark winged angel bear way.
To the 'pale realms of death' our Nation's Read?
Forbid it, Mighiy God! though hope seemed dead.
Though poweries now the skillful hand to heal.
And white the softly whisper 'ne will die.'
Speak but the word, and this Thy servant lives.
With faith undatestics Thy children turn. With faith unfaitering Thy children turn And gramp Omnipotence. One prayer is ours: "God spare our President!"

New England's rocky coasis imploring stand;
Touches with a holy calos, the eurging life
Amid the city's din is bushed in prayer;
Warm bearts in Southern homes their pleadings join;
O'er Western platus the cloud of increse rolls;
The mountain-tops uplift it to the skies.
This where the summer san in beauty dies
Upon the Western sea the murmuring waves
Repeat the message to the disant isles.
And not the Nation only, but the world.
Joins in the prayer, "God save the President."

It is the hour of evening sacrifice;
The sunset lingers in that hallowed spot
Where hearts in unison petitions blond.
Fly swiftly, augel of the living food,
And touch with holy fire our fainting hearts—

Inspire our hope. Jehovalt ever lives!

With faith we cry: "Our President will live!"

While at Honolulu he exchanged offi-cial visits with the United States Minister and consul, with the English and Freuch commissioners. and with the Engust and Freuch commissioners, and with the governor of Hawaii. Lieutenant-Commander George F. Davis, commanding the United States training-ship Minnesota, writes to the Secretary of the Navy, commending the gallant conduct of Adam Weiszel, ship's cook, in jumping overboard and recuring from drowning C. Lorenge, captain of the forecastle, who was accidentally carried overboard by the an-ehor and injured about the head so as to render him insensible. Weissel had also saved one of the him insensible. Weissel had also saved one of the ship's boys from drowning about three months ago. Lieutenant Commander Charles J. Barcley reports to the Navy Department an instance of gallant conduct on the part of Michael Thornton, scaman on board the United States steamer Lancaster, who rescued, at the imminent risk of being killed by the propeller of a tug, a landsman, who had jumped everboard from the tug Leyden while being taken from Boston to Portsmouth. N while being taken from Boston to Portsmouth, N. H., with the draft of men for that vessel. The man was suffering from temporary insanity, and had gone down forthe third time when Thornton dived between the propeller and the man, and, bringing him to the surface, sustained him until taken on board. Lieutenant Commander Barelay says: "It was a most gallant act, and one that I think is sel-dom equaled."

The salvage corps estimate the loss at £20,000 Seventeen steam augines, besides the hydrants are still engaged, but the fire is now completely under control, though the amouldering premises nearest to Cheapside occasionally break into figures in consequence of the fracture of the gaspipes. Workmen are now digging in order to plug the main. The fire was originally caused by an
